ISTANBUL KEMENÇESİ VOL. II

SEYİR  MUZİK

It was a cloudy day in October. We'd headed to the Wallonian countryside to record in the small church of Saint-Rémi, that stood almost secretly behind some very old oak trees. My friend Robbe Kieckens had been called in to accompany the Turkish kemençe master on bendir and tombak. Before recording started, we said a few words but not all that much. The session took an hour or two and was spent in silence, the two men playing music, just music. A single full take was enough for basically every track of the album. And I remember somewhere halfway the session, Derya Türkan suddenly turned his head, smiled briefly and said to his companion: "nice to meet you." On the way back, we looked at the sky. Something had truly been fulfilled.
